

Hancock Jeffersonian.

S. A. SPEAR, Editor.

LET IT BE CAREFULLY NOTED that the HANCOCK JEFFERSONIAN is published in Ohio, and contains ONE THIRD MORE READING MATTER, THAN ANY OTHER PAPER EVER PUBLISHED IN HANCOCK COUNTY.

LOCAL MATTERS.

A Merchant Mill.—Now that we have a prospect of a superabundance of wheat in this county, one or two good Merchant Mills in Findlay seem to be a desideratum.

There is no other improvement, we think, as imperatively called for as this. The present facilities for the manufacture of flour are not sufficient to supply the wants of the county, and the consequence is that consumers have to pay a tariff on flour equivalent to the cost of transportation to mills at a distance, and the return of the flour to market. This cannot be done at a less expense than one dollar per barrel; and this expense imposed on the consumer, is an advantage to neither the producer nor the flour merchant; indeed it is lost to the county altogether. In addition to this, the surplus to be disposed of, will be worth as much more to the producer in flour made in this county than wheat, as the cost of carrying the flour to another market, is less than that of wheat, besides having a good supply of offals in the form of bran, shorts, &c., to serve as very convenient feed. We should think the proprietors of the mills in this place would find it to their interests to fully prepare themselves to meet the wants of the county in this line. There is certainly an excellent inducement for capitalists to make an investment that not only will pay, but advantage the surrounding country very much. Who will undertake it?

The Prospects for a Railroad.—We learn that the President of the Fremont and Indiana Railroad has made a contract for iron sufficient to lay the road from Fremont to Lima, to be delivered by the first of September, or as soon as the conditions of the contract are complied with, which requires that a certain amount of the money be paid down. It is encouraging to know that the iron is purchased, and that too on very reasonable terms, but there is something needed yet, that must be forthcoming before the all-important point is gained, and that is, the remaining twelve thousand dollars subscription to be raised in this county.

Now that a portion of the iron has been paid for in advance, every dollar of the estimated cost of the road, will have to be raised before the Company can venture with safety to resume the work. They must have a guarantee that they will be sustained. If the whole subscription is raised, in the course of this month, we presume that the road can be put in a condition to commence laying the iron by the first of September.

It is exceedingly important that the road be pushed forward to completion without any delay. It would be telling the county more than the twelve thousand yet to be subscribed, to have this road completed in season to take its proportion of this year's yield to market. The individual who has the means to spare, and will not add in this important enterprise, cannot be looked upon as desiring to promote the interests of the county.

The Directors of this road have done themselves much credit by their persevering efforts, beset as they have been by so many discouragements. They have never allowed their zeal to be cold, taking the lead, not only in advancing pecuniary means, but in performing most of the arduous labor needed to get the people along the line of the road, to comprehend their true interests, and to enlist in attaining the end in view. One more good strong lift is required, and that right promptly, and there will be an important improvement secured to the county, which will bring Old Hancock right out of the woods, and place her in the "foreground" among other prosperous, enterprising counties in the state.

A Correction.—In speaking of the Buxa case, last week, we stated that the accused not appearing, "the bail was forfeited, and the case dismissed." We have ascertained since that we were mistaken in regard to the case being dismissed, though in effect that is the true state of the case. The Grand Jury found an indictment against Buxa, who, not appearing as required by law, the recognizance was declared forfeited. Although the statement that the case was dismissed, had nothing to do with the grand complaint as it regards the setting Buxa at large on such an insufficient security, we are disposed to give the facts as they occurred, whether material or immaterial.

Sight Seeing.—The inquisitive propensity of Brother Jonathan, has given him no little notoriety abroad, and with all his rapid improvement in manners and morals, of late, his wealthy, aristocratic relatives across the water, are still disposed to regard him as rather boisterous. Jonathan still insists on knowing the why and the wherefore, not content to have anything veiled in mystery that he is competent to fathom. Kindred to this is the rage for sight-seeing, that carries headlong our restless population. "Novelty before business" was practically exemplified in the large number in town to "see the show," on Monday last, in the midst of the very busiest season of the year. Notwithstanding the urgency at home, they could not forego the temptation of "seeing the elephant."

Deeds of the Grand Jury.—The Grand Jury, during the late term of Court, paid their respects, it is rumored, to not a few of the "erring ones," in both town and country. As far as could be observed by an outsider, they earned their fees, in untiring diligence in discharge of their duties. What their industry will bring forth, is left for the future to determine. We recollect, in boasting once that our jail had rarely any occupants, and that our Court was troubled with but few criminal cases, it was remarked by some one that it was probably as much owing to too great laxity in enforcing the law as in the absence of crime. While we are not willing to admit this, because we believe there are few communities more orderly and law abiding than ours, we must admit that offenders in too many cases have been rather lightly dealt with.

Wardens Pioneer.—Messrs. KERN & LAVER have disposed of their interest in the Wadsworth Pioneer to Mr. CHARLES G. MOON. The Pioneer has been doing an admirable work in the Republican cause, and we have confidence that it will not be wanting in efficiency in the hands of its present proprietor.

Paundling Eagle.—This is the title of a new Republican paper, just started at Paulding, Ohio. It is neatly printed and ably conducted.

A House burned.—The house of Mr. ANDREW CORNWELL, who resides in Eagle township, in this county, caught fire on Tuesday night last, about ten o'clock and was burned to the ground, together with all the furniture. The family, as we understand, were in bed when the fire broke out, and it had made so much headway when discovered that they were barely able to escape, with what little clothing they could catch up in making their retreat. We have not learned what Mr. Cornwell's loss will amount to, but presume it will be four or five hundred dollars. The season is at hand when it becomes especially necessary to guard against accidents by fire.

Robert Burns.—Wit and sarcasm were the striking characteristics of Burns, and they never displayed themselves to a better advantage than in one of his "epicurean sallies." Having called into the studio of a friend, who was engaged in painting Jacob's Dream, he wrote and left on a slip of paper the following verse:

"Dear—, I'll give you some advice,
You'll take it no unwill;
You should paint an angel, man,
But try and paint the devil.
To paint an angel's kittle work;
Wit said Nick there's less danger;
You'll easier paint a well-kent face,
But no sea, well a stranger."

Book Binding.—We would again call attention to the advertisement of Mr. Czekowski, in another column. It is desirable that this gentleman be well sustained in this place for several reasons. In the first place, he is a Polish exile whose history is replete with oppression and persecution in his native land, for opinion's sake. A price being fixed upon his head, he was driven from place to place in Europe, suffering imprisonment and the confiscation of his property. He finally sought refuge in America, and is now anxiously waiting the slow process of the law, that is to clothe him with the rights of an American citizen. In the next place, a Book Bindery is needed here. It has been no little inconvenient to send abroad to have binding done. Mr. Czekowski does good work and at very reasonable prices.

Bandusky Register.—Mr. COOPER has associated with him in the publication of the Register, Mr. C. C. BIRCH.

This reliable daily is always to us a well come visitor, and while we concede to Mr. Birch talent and business tact, we cannot see wherein the Register can be much improved.

The Old and the Young.—The following "pass at arms," not between a sentimental young lady and her lover, but between an old fogey aunt and her errand niece, will, we presume, not apply to any of our young ladies in Findlay, and we therefore make bold to publish it:

A maiden aunt, whose locks of snow
Proclaimed her young—some years ago,
For dressing in the wanton way
By which our modern girls expose
A vast deal more than eyes and nose.

"Why can't you hide what ought to be hid,
And dress modest and plain as your grand,
mother did?"

"Dear aunt, so I do—as you may perceive,
I dress in the mode of Grandmother—Eve!"

Original Poetry.

17 We give place to the following contribution, although we believe the authorities in error in reference to the position occupied by the Ministers alluded to:

For the Jeffersonian.
An appeal to Ministers by
MISS RACHEL GREEN.

Blow, Ministers, the trumpet blow,
Defend the truth of God;
For oh, truth in danger is,
Even on Columbia's soil.

The union of Church and State,
I, in the distance see;
And with a retrospective glance,
I view the misery.

The blood and tears in ages past,
When Melancthon and Luther lived,
And Huss laid down his life.

But you will say this cannot be,
In our progressive age;
The union of the Church and State,
Grows dim on his'try's page.

When ministers in sanctioned robes,
There rulers do condemn;
It brings to mind "Dark Ages," then,
And priestly diadem.

A Beecher, bold, hath led the way,
The pulpit to profane,
With party strife; oh, can it be
Our fathers died in vain?

Oh, could you see the gathering storm
Behind yon dark'ning cloud,
And with prophetic eye behold
Our freedom's blood-stained shroud.

Your zeal would then be changed to tears,
Like bold but erring Saul;
The gospel in its purity
Would then be preached to all.

Oh, hear our Savior's warning words,
While Jews laugh him to scorn,
"Render to Caesar what is his,
To God give back his own."

Oh, follow the example, bright,
Of Jesus—Lord of all,
Do! storm the enemy's stronghold,
But undermine the wall.

"Take off your shoes from off your feet,
You tread on holy ground!"
O, wait and see God's love decreed,
On all the nations round.

Then stern Progression's onward march
Will bring the longed-for day,
When God will banish from our land,
The CURSE OF SLAVERY.

For the Jeffersonian.
Evening Messages.
BY REV. L. J. STINE.

The scene is one that would please—
The course of another day is run,
And the glimmering rays of the setting sun
Are bidding the tops of the trees.

The birds their songs resume:
The earth looks green, and the heav'n's bright,
And the fields are all waving in rich delight,
And the flowers are shedding perfume.

The scene is one that would please—
The merry shouts of the mowers rise,
And commingling with songs of birds, in the skies,
Borne up on the evening breeze.
